

ARTICLE By NICHOLAS CONFESSORE JULY 13, 2016

[ending of article:]

. . . . Another student, Simon Dickerman, said he was voting for Mr. Trump. He volunteered that he frequently visited 4chan, an online message board where users compete with one another to post ever more provocative content, from Nazi shorthand to racist cartoons.

Mr. Dickerman said he understood why such images bothered some older people, though they carried little such charge to him and his friends.

“Of course they don’t actually want Jews to die,” Mr. Dickerman said. “They want to shock.” His peers, he added, “are kids who don’t really know about the Holocaust.”

“And they don’t care about history,” he said. “And some of them think it’s funny.”

Correction: July 13, 2016

An earlier version of this article misstated the age of Andrew Anglin, founder of The Daily Stormer, a white supremacist website. He is 31, not 32.

Maggie Haberman and Kitty Bennett contributed reporting..

A version of this article appears in print on July 14, 2016, on page A1 of the New York edition with the headline: Trump Mines Grievances of Whites Who Feel Lost.